'Property sector seen to improve this year'

The property market is anticipated to improve this year due to the positive domestic market environment, said Real Estate and Housing Developers' Association Malaysia (Rehda) Patron, Datuk Ng Seing Liong. Ng, who is also the organising chairman of MAPEX 2018, highlighted with the nation's economy is stable, the productivity and income level would also accelerate in parallel to it and this would increase one's savings.

"The sentiment from the buyers, especially in the affordable housing sector, is improving," he said. Malaysia Property Expo 2018 (MAPEX 2018) was expected to attract about 60 renowned developers to promote home ownership and property investment, and also see the participation of financial institutions as well as relevant government and agencies departments.

Kuala Lumpur falls out of top 100 most liveable city for Asian expats

The capital of Malaysia has been ranked a lowly 126th in a list of the most liveable cities for Asian expats by ECA International. "One of the main reasons for this is that whilst other locations have improved their air quality, the levels of pollution in Kuala Lumpur, coupled with relatively high rates of petty crime, have seen the city slip down the rankings."
